

ST. JAMES CATHEDRAL

July 20, 2014

Dear Friends,

Summer is supposed to be a time for slowing down to smell the flowers, and I hope it's that for you. If nothing else, the recent, uninterrupted stretch of hotter-than-usual days should have forced a certain amount of slowing down!

Around here, however, things have been anything but slow. Active, I would call them! And that's especially true with regard to the comings and goings of our staff. Some significant changes have happened or are about to happen and I would like to share them with you.

In the first place, Lita McBride, our director of Children's Faith Formation, has made the difficult decision to retire after leading that program for nine years. Lita will be missed! She has served our children and their families faithfully and lovingly. Her deep faith and prayerfulness are gifts that she has shared generously with the entire parish but especially with our children. It's no wonder that, under her leadership, the program has grown and prospered. And while I find it difficult to see Lita move on, I am happy to think that she will finally have some time to slow down and take care of herself. God knows she has earned this! Lita, our prayers accompany you – along with our gratitude!

Stepping in to take Lita's place is Brenda Bellamy who served as Cathedral sacristan for a number of years until more recently when she began working with the young children of school age who were preparing for baptism and the sacraments of initiation. Brenda has also ably led our Confirmation program for teenagers and adults. And while it's true that no one really replaces another, I am confident that Brenda, with her considerable gifts for teaching and organization, will be a worthy successor to Lita McBride.

Caitlin Lanigan, who has been working with Patty Bowman in social outreach and advocacy ministries for the past two years – and has coordinated and greatly expanded our young adult ministry – recently took a position with the archdiocese to direct their ministry to young adults. The archdiocese's gain is most definitely our loss but I think we should feel complimented that they saw obvious talent and seized it! I am sorry to lose Caitlin but I wish her well as she brings her great spirit and her wonderful gifts for ministry to her new position, and I take this opportunity to thank her in a special way for all she has done to breathe such life and energy into our young adult ministry. What she has done in a short time is nothing short of remarkable. We have yet to identify Caitlin's successor.

Lastly, our associate organist, Clint Kraus, is leaving us this month to begin medical school in Oregon. Apparently one doctorate was not enough for Clint! For week after week for the past 17 years Clint has dazzled us with his virtuosity and verve. Not only is he an extraordinarily gifted performer and accompanist, he is also a brilliant improviser. Over the years, Clint has also contributed significantly to our youth music program. It is difficult to bid him good-bye but know you will join me in wishing him the very best on this next lap of his journey.

Stepping into Clint's place to assist our senior organist, Joseph Adam, is Sam Libra, a talented young musician and organist who has been serving as organist at St. Philomena's Church in Des Moines for the past two years. Sam is currently working on his Masters in Organ Performance at the University of Washington with particular emphasis on sacred music and music history. I am confident that Sam will be a happy addition to the staff of our music department and that he will contribute significantly to the beauty of our Cathedral liturgies. Welcome, Sam!

Holy Things, Holy People

Exploring Catholic history in the Northwest through treasures from the past

PART 12: BISHOP O'DEA'S BELL

20 JULY 2014

Bishop Edward O'Dea served as Bishop of Seattle from 1896 until his death on Christmas Day, 1932. His extraordinarily long tenure makes him a towering figure in the history of the Catholic Church in the Pacific Northwest.

O'Dea was born in Massachusetts, but while he was still a young boy his family migrated west, settling in Portland. Mother Joseph became a family friend—as the story goes, during the building of St. Vincent's Hospital, Mother Joseph would go in each night after the workmen had gone home, to inspect their work with her expert eye, while a young boy—often “Eddie” O'Dea—carried her lantern for her. O'Dea was a regular altar server at Portland's Cathedral where (according to a biography written for his Golden Jubilee) he faithfully assisted “since first his boyish tongue could master the Latin responses.” He was also an excellent horseman: his jet black mare Deerfoot was banned from competing at the Hillsboro County Fair after an unprecedented string of victories.

After finishing high school, O'Dea told Archbishop F. N. Blanchet of Portland that he wanted to become a priest. Blanchet decided to send him to Montreal where, decades earlier, he and his brother A. M. A. Blanchet had prepared for the priesthood. In the summer of 1876, at the age of 19, O'Dea set off for seminary, traveling alone, with a letter of recommendation from Archbishop Blanchet in his pocket. The journey was grueling: he had to take a five-day boat trip to San Francisco and then board a train for the long trip east.

O'Dea's luggage was quite heavy, owing to the fact that he was carrying a huge number of nickels! In Portland in 1876, the preferred currency was gold dust, and many merchants would not accept nickels—which did not prevent them from ending up in the collection plate. Father Fierens, pastor of Portland's Cathedral, had a large supply of nickels which he gave to his former altar boy—enough, as it turned out, to cover six months' expenses at the seminary. As O'Dea liked to say later, it was the only time in his life when wealth was a burden to him.

Because of the length and expense of the journey, O'Dea would not return to Portland until after his ordination six years later. He reached home in 1883, and Archbishop Seghers (later martyred in Alaska) assigned him as assistant at the Portland Cathedral. He then served as secretary to Archbishop Gross for ten years before becoming pastor of St. Patrick's in Portland. It was there that a reporter from the Oregonian came one evening in 1896 and banged on the front door. O'Dea put his head out of his bedroom window to see what the man wanted.

Bell and paper clips from the desk of Bishop Edward John O'Dea, third Bishop of Seattle. Upon the death of a bishop, it is customary to store everything on and in his desk in the diocesan archives. The Archives of the Archdiocese of Seattle has kept the bell Bishop O'Dea used to call his secretary, his paper clips, sealing wax, pencils and other items ever since his death on Christmas Day, 1932. Courtesy of the Archives of the Catholic Archdiocese of Seattle.

“We have a dispatch from Rome saying you have been appointed Bishop of Nisqually; have you anything to say about it?” the reporter shouted.

“I haven't a thing to say, and this is the first I have heard of it,” O'Dea replied.

The rumors were true. On September 8, 1896, O'Dea was consecrated bishop at St. James, Vancouver. His installation liturgy was one of the most splendid the Northwest had ever seen, with five bishops and 85 priests present, and the P-I described him as “one of the youngest as well as one of the best-looking prelates in the United States.”

But O'Dea was tougher than he looked. He embraced his new task of missionary bishop, traveling up and down his vast diocese, which at that time consisted of 40 churches and missions scattered across 70,000 square miles--the entire state of Washington. Much of his time was spent on horseback. One of his priests, stationed in a remote corner of the diocese, complained of the isolation and hardship, so O'Dea invited him to take a few days off and join him on his rounds. “I endured the stiff journeys for a few days through wind, rain and mosquitoes and the worse nights in vermin-infested and noisy lodgings,” the priest later wrote, “and then I begged permission to terminate my ‘holiday’ and go back to the comparative ease of my mission.”

O'Dea encountered every challenge cheerfully and creatively. He was so impressed with the choir of the parish in Cheney, one of the few choirs of any kind in the eastern part of the state, that he loaded the entire choir along with a wheezy portable organ into a wagon and brought them along on his pastoral tour of the region!

O'Dea was a gentle leader. Once, in conversation with a pastor, O'Dea proposed a particular way of doing things. The priest asked, “is this a command?” O'Dea responded, “I do not command any man.” Those simple words said everything about O'Dea's quiet, effective leadership, which would encounter and surmount incredible challenges—including the building of a great Cathedral.

—Corinna Laughlin, Pastoral Assistant for Liturgy

Journey of Faith

An Illustrated History of the Church in Western Washington

It's a story of saints and sinners; of Natives and newcomers, of missionaries, teachers, and builders, working together to build the church in western Washington.... It's a story of spirit and sacrifice for the glory of God.

Journey of Faith is an extraordinary new telling of a remarkable story: our story! With richly-colored illustrations and meticulously researched text, this new history of the Archdiocese of Seattle brings our inspiring Catholic story to life, from the days when thousands of Native peoples called this land holy ground, to the first explorers and missionaries, to the building of our churches and schools, to the present day. The “graphic novel” format will have a special appeal for young people, but the book will also be ideal for anyone who is interested in history or just wants a simple and accessible overview of how the Church in the Pacific Northwest—and St. James Cathedral—came to be!

Journey of Faith was produced by the Office of Catholic Faith Formation of the Archdiocese of Seattle, and was written by our own Corinna & Maria Laughlin!
